

I want say that I do not think the FCC should not implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protection. Before signing up we would get an average of 6 to 8 call a week, usually around noon and dinner times. Many times there would not be anyone on the other end of the phone. If there was, you would have to almost be rude to them to get them to shut up.

After signing up with the Indiana Attorney General we have not had the calls. It has been great.
